

ALEXANDRIA, VA.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1872.

THE C. & O. R. R. AND ALEXANDRIA, &C. The Stauston Virginian in an able article on the future of Virginia, especially in connection with the completion to the Ohio, of the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and the building of the proposed branch to this city, says:

"When we consider that deep water can only be reached 30 miles below Richmond, which would make it 165 miles from Staunton, and that it can be reached at Alexandria 115 miles | tion." from this point, the logic of trade compels us to arrive at the conclusion, that what is now termed the branch road to Alexandria, will in fact be the main channel of communication not only for trade, but passengers, between the western country, drained by this great line, and the east. Assuming that 500,000 tons of coal of Virginia and West Virginia to seek a market east, at a cost of one cent per mile per ton, and that by taking the straight chute from Staunton to Alexandria, a saving in distance to the cities of consumption would be made of about 50 miles, an irresistible and controlling argument is at once furnished why Richmond traffic as her own demands will require. A clear saving of a quarter million of dollars a year to consumers of coal will give direction to the channel of its transit. And this fact, will of itself, to say nothing of the almost fabulous mineral wealth that would be developed through the country this short line would traconstruction of the road from Staunton to Alexandria and Washington.

There are four points in Virginia which ly little to her prosperity and wealth, unless our people avail themselves of the advantages it will present. Those points are Covington, Stangton, Richmond and Alexandria. The first place is a mere a village as yet, but ten years time will find it proud of a population of turing in New York and other places, and been probably five thousand people. Staunton now is rapidly growing. She will have the advantage of the railroad workshops, the energy, capital and business experience, of the livest and private houses. population of any inland town in the South. and with the facilities she will possess of reaching all sections of the country, on the comple- ness a part of the postal system of the Governtion of the various railroad enterprises in process | ment meets with strong opposition in many of construction and contemplated, her future is in her own hands. Richmond and Alexandria alike must be the architects of their own fortunes. The means will be at their com- tion. mand, and it is for the people of those cities to seize them with firm and bold hands, if they would keep pace with the material progress which the next decade is to unfold. would be worse than sluggards, if, with the diversified commerce of a continent pouring into them, they did not rise with the great events and the spirit, which the age vouchsafes. and push forward in the march of material im-

FRANCE.—The political complications in France excite apprehensions. The compromise proposed by the Government party in the . Assembly, by which the responsibility of the Ministry was to be assured, seems not to have been errried into effect. "The city is becoming excited," says a special to the London Times. The workingmen are not satisfied with the majority report on the President's address and the writer of the report "M. Batbie, is already very unpopular." The debate on the report of the committee on the President's message was opened yesterday. While it was in progress the excitement, both in the chamber and outside, was intense. It appeared that the Right and the Right Centre were fully united and well organized. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the situation at Versailles remained unchanged. The opinion seemed to gain ground that a compromise would be effected. The Provinces are sending M. Thiers words of cheer and | deaths 32. promises of support. A special dispatch yesterday states that General Manteuffel, commanding the German army of occupation in France, has received orders to concentrate his forces in the event of certain contingencies.

MR. GREELEY.-The whole country will regret to hear that the condition of Mr. Greeley's health is such as to almost preclude the hope of his recovery. Long watching, poignant grief, at the loss of his wife, great mental excitement and exhausting labor have proven even too much for his robust constitution The disease which has seized him has paralyzed both his mind and his body. Since his illness he has been delirious at times, and often unconscious. President Gorman and the Directors of the C. & O. Canal Company have concluded their tour of inspection over the line of the canal. The canal was found in a fair condition, but some improvements were ordered to be made upon the permanent works of the same after the close of navigation. The boats, in consequence of the epizootic among the horses, have | dollars and thirty-six cents in the treasury for fallen off from about forty a day to twelve or fifteen. The disease is now among the horses of the mines, and it is probable that the coal trade of both the canal and railroad will be seriously affected.

A Texas company is putting up fresh green turtle in sealed cans. They catch their turtles, put them in pens like cattle, feed them like hogs, and put them in cans for market. STOCK JOBBING IN NEW YORK.—There are some queer incidents connected with the great transactions in Chicago and Northwestern stock in Wall street, which have their interest as interwoven with the gigantic struggles of the bulls and bears, the former endeavoring to 1873. break down and the latter to force up prices. Jay Gould's arrest did not hinder his operations, and as The Tribune says, "the process of squeezing the unfortunate speculators who found themselves in Mr. Gould's way went on without interruption while the ex-President of Eric was arranging his little matter of a million dollars bail." How the turn of fortune's wheel in the financial centre may alter the tory to the meeting of the Legislature. relations of the gamblers in millions is thus told by The Tribune:

"Mr. Gould made his first notable appearance in Erie as the ally of Com. Vanderbilt at the time of the great Drew corner of 1868; but it was not long before he attached himself to those more congenial spirits. Smith and Fisk, and became what he has remained until very recently, the Commodore's bitter foe. Many of the most scandalous transactions of the Fisk and Gould directory were among the incidents of the Vanderbilt warfare. If anything could be depended upon in Wall street or the Eric Railway offices, it seemed to be the hostility between Vanderbilt and Gould. That was an enimity which has survived numberless changes and combinations; had cost, as men supposed. millions now to one side, now to the other, and was founded upon circumstances which neither was likely to forget. With Smith, on the other hand, Gould's connection was of a peculiarly intimate nature. They had been partners in the most outrageous proceedings of the Erie ring. They had helped each other in the seizure of the foreign stock. They had grown rich and disreputable together. Yet here we suddenly find Gould conspiring with Vanderbilt to ruin Smith, and Smith giving up to President Watson the evidence which is to convict the firm of Smith & Gould of swindling millions of dollars.

The World takes the ground that the suit against Gould is bona fide, and that it has no connection with his stock-gambling schemes further than that he happened to be deep in this one when he was "hauled before the bar of justice." It is said that Daniel Drew is owing the President of Erie, refuses to say anything more regarding this than that if he discovered instances of fraud he would prosecute Drew.

There is a great show of virtue in the proceeding, and we do not doubt that the Erie Company was enormously plundered during the regime of Fisk and Gould, but the experience of the past does not justify any expectation that the criminals will come to serious

WOODHULL AND CLAFLIN. -- Strenuous efforts have been made to get Victoria Woodhull and Tennie C. Claffin out of Ludlow-street jail, but so far without success. It will take from $25,000 to $30,000 to bail the women. Besides the suit on which they are arrested, there are seven or eight other suits already to be served it these parties get bail in the present case. There are libel suits; suits for blackmail; suits in the State courts, as well as in the United States Court, and the result of bail, if it could be obtained, would not free the women from durance vile While Mr. Beecher's friends have nothing to do with the arrest of Mrs. Woodhull and her sister, there are outside parties who are determined to have this matter probed to the bottom. him to murder Brooks. Beginning with the Brooks conspiracy. Morrow's affidavits profess to tell by whom he was immediately instigated to do the work of assassination in that instance, giving names and places and particulars; how the murderous gang dogged the footsteps of that faithful offieer by day and by night to kill him, for no other reason than that he was faithful to his duty; how when Morrow's assassin heart failed him, he was bullied until the attempted murder was accomplished; and how, when he had done the work, he was secreted for days and weeks, and carried from place to place, and paid "five dotlars' for the fiendish job! Then follow parti-culars as to the alibi, which he says was fabricated for his defence, thus adding perjury and subornation of perjury to the attempted murder. Fourth in this startling catalogue of imputed crime is the charge by Morrow that the terrible "coal oil fire" at Ninth and Wharton was instigated by some of the same gang. This is of a character to chill the blood of every one who recalls the terrible consequences of that calamity-men women and children startled from their beds on a winter night with flames all around them-the every streets surging with liquid fire, so that every avenue of escape was cut off, and forced to fly from their burning homes only to be engulfed in the rivers of flame sweeping through the streets. Nothing can be more horrible than the contemplation of this awful calamity as a deliberate work of organized crime. Fifth in the list of accusations is the charge that the attempted was the work of the same "crowd." Sixth is the murder of Peter Mannox, at Ninth and Chesnut, a few years ago and seventh, is the burglary and enormous robbery of the Saving

Fund, at Twelfth and Chestnut, in 1868. It would have been better to permit Morrow to remain unsentenced for the remainder of his Oats 45a50. Rye 60a70. life, than ;o leave the record he has made stamd as it does, or to let slip the opportunity to fasten on their authors the crimes he enumerates.
